TIP FOR THE ADULT

Putting a feeling into words already helps calm it (Lieberman et al., 2007). Welcome every feeling: none is forbidden; what we learn is to choose our actions.

Where I feel it in my body

I think of a strong feeling. I colour the places in my body where I feel it: head, tummy, hands, heart...

I feel my emotion...

TIP FOR THE ADULT

Feelings leave traces in the body (Nummenmaa et al., 2014). Noticing them early makes it possible to use a strategy before the feeling overflows.

My feelings thermometer

I colour the thermometer up to the level I am at right now.

5		It’s too much, I need help.
4		It’s strong.
3		It’s starting to build.
2		I’m okay.
1		I am calm.

TIP FOR THE ADULT

A 1-to-5 scale gives the child and the adult a shared language. Agree together on what to do at each level, then post it.
